ADAM CHARLSON,

Plaintiff,

No. C 14-3041 PJH

v.

DHR INTERNATIONAL INC., et al.,

Defendants.

ORDER GRANTING MOTION TO DISMISS; ORDER DENYING MOTION TO REMAND

The motion of defendants Carol Hartman and Christine Abrams for an order dismissing the causes of action asserted against them, and the motion of plaintiff Adam Charlson for an order remanding the case, came on for hearing before this court on September 17, 2014. Defendants appeared by their counsel Elizabeth O'Brien, and plaintiff appeared by his counsel Christopher LeClerc and Michele Gustafson. Having read the parties' papers and carefully considered their arguments and the relevant legal authority, the court hereby GRANTS the motion to dismiss, with leave to amend, and DENIES the motion to remand, as follows and for the reasons stated at the hearing.

BACKGROUND

Plaintiff Adam Charlson ("Charlson") entered into an Employment Agreement with DHR International, Inc. ("DHR"), effective on May 14, 2012. Charlson was to serve as an executive search consultant for DHR, as well as Managing Director for DHR's West Coast operations in San Francisco. As compensation for performing his duties, Charlson was to receive commissions, bonuses, and incentives as set forth in the Agreement. Generally, the commissions and bonuses were to be paid once a year.

Charlson asserts that by the beginning of 2014, he was under extreme financial

1 distress due to family expenses plus costs of divorce. In January 2014, Charlson 2 requested that DHR to pay him sooner than scheduled, and in particular, that he be 3 permitted to move to a pure commission basis with monthly payments, rather than the 4 annual payment schedule set in the Employment Agreement. DHR's Chief Financial 5 Officer, Doug Black ("Black") allegedly stated that DHR would advance Charlson a one-6 time repayable loan in April 2014, in advance of the annual payout of commissions, 7 provided that Charlson collected all fees from his clients by March 2014.

8 Charlson alleges that on March 15, 2014, he called Black to tell him he had collected 9 the fees as promised, but Black responded that he did not know whether Geoffrey 10 Hoffmann (DHR's Chief Executive Officer – sued as "Geoffrey Hoffman") would honor the 11 agreement. Charlson claims that he then reached out to Hoffmann telling him of his dire 12 situation, and also stating that he did not want to leave DHR but that he might be compelled 13 to do so if DHR could not help him by paying him the commissions he had earned to date.
14 He also allegedly told Hoffmann that he had been getting calls from other firms who were 15 interested in pursuing him. Charlson claims that neither Hoffmann nor Black ever 16 confirmed that they would honor the agreement Charlson had reached with Black.

17 Charlson asserts that having received no assurance regarding the financial 18 arrangement, he felt increasing pressure to consider other employment options, and began 19 speaking to other search firms. He went as far as setting up at least one meeting with a 20 search company (Cook Associates) when he was in Chicago for a DHR partners' meeting, 21 and claims that he advised Hoffmann of that fact.

22 On April 6, 2014, he was informed on the phone by counsel for DHR that he had 23 been terminated by DHR, that he would receive a letter, and that he should have his 24 attorney review the letter. That same day, he received a letter (by email) terminating his 25 employment effective immediately, for purported misconduct and cause. Charlson alleges 26 that the accusations in the Termination Letter are false, as he did not commit any 27 misconduct, disclose any confidential information, or violate the Employment Agreement.

28 Charlson asserts that upon the termination of his employment, DHR refused to pay

1 him the money that was owed to him. He also claims that within hours of terminating his 2 employment, DHR began a "smear campaign" against him. This included sending a letter
3 to Cook Associates telling them he had stolen information from DHR or otherwise breached 4 his contract or other duty to DHR; and discrediting him in San Francisco by falsely reporting 5 to his former employer (Caldwell Partners) that he had stolen money, information and/or 6 property from DHR, with the result that John Wallace, CEO of Caldwell Partners, cancelled 7 an interview on April 17, 2014 that had previously been set up for the purpose of discussing 8 Charlson's possible return to work at Caldwell.

9 On April 24, 2014, DHR filed suit against Charlson in this court, alleging that he had 10 violated his fiduciary duty and duty of loyalty owed to DHR. On May 28, 2014, Charlson 11 filed the complaint in this action in San Francisco Superior Court, against DHR and four 12 DHR employees – Hoffmann; Black; Carol Hartman ("Hartman"), an Executive VP in DHR's 13 San Francisco office; and Christine Abrams ("Abrams"), employed in DHR's San Francisco 14 office.

15 The complaint asserts seventeen causes of action under California statutory and 16 common law: (1) defamation (against DHR, Hartman, Abrams); (2) tortious interference 17 with prospective economic advantage (against DHR, Hartman, Abrams); (3) negligent 18 interference with prospective economic advantage (against DHR, Hartman, Abrams); 19 (4) breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (against DHR); (5) marital 20 status discrimination, in violation of the California Fair Employment and Housing Act 21 ("FEHA") (against DHR); (6) failure to prevent discrimination - FEHA (against DHR); 22 (7) intentional infliction of emotional distress (against all defendants); (8) wrongful 23 termination (against DHR); (9) breach of written contract (against DHR); (10) quantum 24 meruit (against DHR); (11) retaliation in violation of the California Labor Code (against 25 DHR); (12) fraud (against DHR); (13) - (16) failure to pay wages earned, failure to pay 26 overtime, failure to provide accurate pay stubs, and failure to pay all wages at or near time 27 of separation, in violation of the California Labor Code (all asserted against DHR); and 28 (17) unfair business practices under California Business and Professions Code § 17200

1 (against DHR and Hartman).

2 Defendants removed the case to this court on July 2, 2014, alleging diversity
3 jurisdiction, notwithstanding that defendants Hartman and Abrams are citizens of California, 4 as is Charlson. In the notice of removal, defendants allege that Hartman and Abrams were 5 fraudulently joined, as plaintiff has failed to state a claim against them, and assert that the 6 citizenship of those two defendants should be disregarded.

7 Hartman and Abrams now seek an order dismissing the five causes of action 8 asserted against them – the first cause of action for defamation, the second cause of action 9 for tortious interference with prospective economic advantage, the third cause of action for 10 negligent interference with prospective economic advantage, the seventh cause of action for 11 intentional infliction of emotional distress, and the seventeenth cause of action for 12 unlawful/unfair business practices under § 17200 (alleged as to Hartman only) – for failure 13 to state a claim.

14 Charlson seeks an order remanding the case, on the basis that removal was 15 improper, as Hartman and Abrams are citizens of California, as is Charlson, and there is 16 thus no complete diversity of citizenship. Defendants' opposition is premised on the same 17 argument it makes in the motion to dismiss – that the complaint does not state a claim 18 against Hartman and Abrams.

DISCUSSION

A. Legal Standards

1. Motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim

22 A motion to dismiss under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) tests for the legal 23 sufficiency of the claims alleged in the complaint. Ileto v. Glock, Inc., 349 F.3d 1191, 24 1199-1200 (9th Cir. 2003). Review is limited to the contents of the complaint. Allarcom 25 Pay Television, Ltd. v. Gen. Instrument Corp., 69 F.3d 381, 385 (9th Cir. 1995). To survive 26 a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, a complaint generally must satisfy only the 27 minimal notice pleading requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8, which requires 28 that a complaint include a “short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader

United States District Court
For the Northern District of California

1 is entitled to relief." Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2).

2 A complaint may be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim if the 3 plaintiff fails to state a cognizable legal theory, or has not alleged sufficient facts to support 4 a cognizable legal theory. Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dep't, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir.
5 1990). While the court is to accept as true all the factual allegations in the complaint, 6 legally conclusory statements, not supported by actual factual allegations, need not be 7 accepted. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678-79 (2009); see also In re Gilead Scis. Sec.
8 Litig., 536 F.3d 1049, 1055 (9th Cir. 2008).

9 The allegations in the complaint "must be enough to raise a right to relief above the 10 speculative level[;]" and a motion to dismiss should be granted if the complaint does not 11 proffer enough facts to state a claim for relief that is plausible on its face. Bell Atlantic 12 Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 558-59 (2007) (citations and quotations omitted). "A 13 claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to 14 draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." 15 Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (citation omitted). "[W]here the well-pleaded facts do not permit the 16 court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, the complaint has alleged – but 17 it has not 'show[n]' – 'that the pleader is entitled to relief.'" Id. at 679. In the event that 18 dismissal is warranted, it is generally without prejudice, unless it is clear the complaint 19 cannot be saved by amendment. Sparling v. Daou, 411 F.3d 1006, 1013 (9th Cir. 2005).

20 Although the court generally may not consider material outside the pleadings when 21 resolving a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the court may consider matters 22 that are properly the subject of judicial notice. Lee v. City of Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 23 688-89 (9th Cir. 2001); Mack v. South Bay Beer Distrib., Inc., 798 F.2d 1279, 1282 (9th 24 Cir. 1986). Additionally, the court may consider exhibits attached to the complaint, see Hal 25 Roach Studios, Inc. v. Richard Feiner & Co., Inc., 896 F.2d 1542, 1555 n.19 (9th Cir.
26 1989), as well as documents referenced extensively in the complaint and documents that 27 form the basis of a the plaintiff's claims. See No. 84 Employer-Teamster Jt. Counsel 28 Pension Tr. Fund v. America West Holding Corp., 320 F.3d 920, 925 n.2 (9th Cir. 2003).

1 2. Motions to remand

2 A defendant may remove a civil action filed in state court if the action could have 3 originally been filed in federal court. 28 U.S.C. § 1441. A plaintiff may seek to have a case 4 remanded to the state court from which it was removed if the district court lacks jurisdiction
5 or if there is a defect in the removal procedure. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c). The removal statutes
6 are construed restrictively, so as to limit removal jurisdiction. Shamrock Oil & Gas Corp. v.
7 Sheets, 313 U.S. 100, 108-09 (1941).

8 The district court must remand the case if it appears before final judgment that the 9 court lacks subject matter jurisdiction. 28 U.S.C. 1447(c). There is a “strong presumption” 10 against removal jurisdiction. Gaus v. Miles, Inc., 980 F.2d 564, 566 (9th Cir. 1992). The 11 burden of establishing federal jurisdiction for purposes of removal is on the party seeking 12 removal. Valdez v. Allstate Ins. Co., 372 F.3d 1115, 1117 (9th Cir. 2004). Doubts as to 13 removability are resolved in favor of remanding the case to state court. Matheson v.
14 Progressive Specialty Ins. Co., 319 F.3d 1089, 1090 (9th Cir. 2003).

15 B. The Parties' Motions

16 1. Motion to dismiss

17 Hartman and Abrams seek an order dismissing the claims asserted against them, for 18 failure to state a claim. They argue that the first cause of action for defamation fails to state 19 a claim against them, and that the failure to adequately plead defamation is fatal to the 20 remaining claims against them (second, third, seventh and seventeenth causes of action).
21 They contend that the first cause of a action for defamation fails because it lacks specificity 22 as to whether the allegedly defamatory statements were oral or written, as to the specifics 23 of what was communicated, and as to whom it was communicated. They contend that the 24 remaining causes of action fail because they all hinge on the insufficient allegations of the 25 first cause of action for defamation.

26 In the first cause of action for defamation, Charlson alleges two incidents – 27 (1) statements made to Cook Associates in a letter sent by DHR, to the effect that Charlson
28 was stealing confidential information and breaching his duty of loyalty to DHR; and (2)

1 statements made in April and May of 2014 to personnel at Caldwell Partners, either orally
2 or in writing, by Hartman and Abrams acting on behalf of DHR, to the effect that Charlson
3 had been fired from DHR for stealing confidential information and/or breaching his fiduciary 4 duty or duty of loyalty. Cplt ¶ 97.

5 In the second cause of action for tortious interference with prospective economic 6 advantage, Charlson asserts that Hartman and Abrams had also previously worked for 7 Caldwell; that he and Caldwell had parted amicably and Caldwell was eager to have him 8 return; and that DHR, Hartman, and Abrams disclosed to Caldwell personnel that 9 Charlson's employment had been terminated because he "stole information" from DHR; 10 that in so doing defendants violated Charlson's right to privacy and defamed him; that after 11 learning that Charlson had allegedly stolen information from DHR, Caldwell rescinded an 12 offer for an interview it had previously extended to Charlson; and that defendants intended 13 to disrupt the relationship between Charlson and Caldwell. Cplt ¶¶ 105-113.

14 Similarly, in the third cause of action for negligent interference with prospective 15 economic advantage, Charlson alleges that DHR, Hartman, and Abrams disclosed to 16 Caldwell personnel that Charlson's employment had been terminated, and stated that the 17 termination was for "stealing;" that in so doing defendants violated Charlson's right to 18 privacy and defamed him; that after learning of the alleged "stealing," Caldwell rescinded 19 an offer of an interview; and that defendants knew or should have known that disclosing the 20 termination and purported "stealing" to Caldwell personnel would disrupt the relationship 21 between Charlson and Caldwell. Cplt ¶¶ 120-122.

22 In the seventh cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress ("IIED"), 23 Charlson alleges that "[d]efendants' conduct," including "discrimination, retaliation, 24 defamation, and criminally withholding wages" constitutes extreme and outrageous 25 conduct, and was intended to cause harm to Charlson. Cplt ¶¶ 143-144.

26 In the seventeenth cause of action under the UCL, Charlson alleges that 27 "[d]efendants' actions are unlawful business practices in that they constitute defamation."
28 Cplt ¶¶ 196-197.

1 Defamation requires the intentional publication of a statement of fact which is false, 2 unprivileged, and has a natural tendency to injure or which causes special damage. See 3 Price v. Stossel, 620 F.3d 992, 998 (9th Cir. 2010; see also Taus v. Loftus, 40 Cal. 4th 683, 4 720 (2007). "Defamation is effected by either . . . libel [or] slander." Cal. Civ. Code 5 § 44.

6 "Libel is a false and unprivileged publication by writing, printing, picture, effigy, or 7 other fixed representation . . . , which exposes any person to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or 8 obloquy, . . . or which has a tendency to injure him in his occupation." Cal. Civ. Code § 45.
9 "Slander is a false and unprivileged publication, orally uttered, . . . which, among other 10 things, "[c]harges any person with crime" or "[t]ends directly to injure him in respect to his 11 office, profession, trade or business" or "[w]hich, by natural consequence, causes actual 12 damage." Cal. Civ. Code § 46.

13 "Publication means communication to some third person who understands the 14 defamatory meaning of the statement and its application to the person to whom reference 15 is made. It need not be made to the 'public' at large; communication to a single individual 16 is sufficient." Smith v. Maldonado, 72 Cal. App. 4th 637, 645 (1999). In addition, the 17 alleged defamatory statements must be false and therefore also statements of fact, not 18 merely expressions of opinion. Gregory v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 17 Cal. 3d 596, 604
19 (1976). A privileged publication is one that is made "[i]n a communication, without malice, 20 to a person interested therein, (1) by one who is also interested." Cal. Civ. Code § 47(c).

21 While the exact words or circumstances of the slander need not be alleged to state a 22 claim for defamation, the substance of the defamatory statement must be alleged. Silicon 23 Knights, Inc. v. Crystal Dynamics, Inc., 983 F.Supp. 1303, 1314 (N.D. Cal. 1997) (quoting 24 Chabra v. S. Monterey County Memorial Hospital, Inc., 1994 WL 564566 at *6 (N.D. Cal.
25 1994)). "Even under liberal federal pleading standards, 'general allegations of the 26 defamatory statements' which do not identify the substance of what was said are 27 insufficient." Jacobson v. Schwarzenegger, 357 F.Supp. 2d 1198, 1216 (C.D. Cal. 2004)
28 (citation omitted); see also Qualls v. Regents of Univ. of California, 2013 WL 4828587, at *8

1 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 6, 2013) (finding allegations of defamatory statements concerning "poor 2 performance," "dishonesty," and "insubordination" were insufficiently specific, where plaintiff 3 failed provide additional supporting facts).

4 Here, Hartman and Abrams argue that the complaint fails to state a claim for 5 defamation because Charlson fails to plead whether the alleged defamatory statements 6 were oral or written, does not specify to whom the statements were made or when they 7 were made, does not identify the person who is alleged to have said which words, and 8 alleges only that someone made vague comments concerning plaintiff's termination, for 9 stealing confidential information and/or breaching fiduciary duties or duties of loyalty.
10 Hartman and Abrams contend that Charlson's failure to provide the requisite specificity 11 required by California law means that the defamation claim fails to state a claim.

12 They argue further that because the defamation claim forms the basis of the other 13 claims asserted against them (as indicated above), those causes of action must also be 14 dismissed for failure to state a claim. In addition, they contend that the IIED cause of 15 action fails to state a claim because it is based on conclusory allegations of loss of earnings 16 and benefits, and mental and emotional distress, rather than specific facts showing he in 17 fact sustained emotional distress.

18 In opposition, Charlson asserts that the complaint adequately pleads defamation.
19 He argues that there is no absolute rule requiring that a plaintiff alleging defamation plead 20 the exact words of the defamatory comments. He contends that libelous words must be 21 sufficiently identified, but that while pleading the exact words is helpful (if possible), it is not 22 required.

23 He argues that the complaint specifically identifies the alleged defamatory statement 24 – that Abrams and Hartman told Wallace or someone at Caldwell that he had stolen 25 information from DHR. He concedes that he does not know the "exact words," but 26 contends that it is sufficient for the complaint to identify the content of the defamatory 27 statement as it was relayed to him (that he had stolen from DHR), to identify who allegedly 28 said it (Abrams and/or Hartman), to identify the audience (John Wallace or someone at

1 Caldwell who shared it with Wallace), and to identify the approximate time frame (April 2 2014).

3 As for DHR's suggestion that the complaint fails to state a claim for defamation 4 because the fact that Charlson was terminated is a true statement, Charlson responds that 5 he is not challenging any statement that he was terminated. Rather he is challenging the 6 statement that he was terminated for stealing from DHR, which he claims is false because 7 he did not steal anything. Indeed, he notes that John Wallace was aware of the termination 8 when he set up the interview to discuss Charlson's possible return to Caldwell Partners, but 9 it was only after he heard that the termination was allegedly for stealing that he cancelled 10 the interview.

11 As for DHR's contention that the second, third, seventh and seventeenth causes of 12 action against Hartman and Abrams are based solely on defamation, Charlson responds 13 that the claims of interference with prospective economic advantage are based not only on 14 the alleged defamation, but also on breach of privacy. He asserts that the IIED claim is 15 based on "all of the alleged conduct" including defamation, as is the UCL claim against 16 Hartman.

17 Finally, Charlson asserts that he has stated a valid IIED claim, as he has alleged 18 that he was in dire financial straits at the time he was fired by DHR, and that he was also 19 going through an acrimonious divorce and dealing with major family upheaval, and that 20 Hartman and Abrams maliciously told his former employer (Caldwell Partners) that he had 21 been fired by DHR for stealing information, knowing that it would impair his ability to obtain 22 employment at Caldwell (and possibly other search firms). He argues that deliberately 23 setting out to destroy a former colleague's reputation in the industry is extreme and 24 outrageous behavior.

25 The court finds that the motion must be GRANTED. It is true that in an action for 26 libel, it is the common practice to plead the exact words, as "[t]he general rule is that the 27 words constituting an alleged libel must be specifically identified, if not pleaded verbatim, in 28 the complaint." Kahn v. Bower (1991) 232 Cal. App.3d 1599, 1612 n.5 (1991) (citations

1 omitted). However, "[i]n an action for slander this is often difficult," and it may be sufficient 2 for the plaintiff to simply allege the substance of the statement. 5 Witkin, California 3 Procedure 5th (2008), Pleading § 739; see also Okun v. Superior Court, 29 Cal. 3d 442, 4 458 (1981). Here, the substance of the words – that the reason Charlson was fired was 5 that he had stolen information from DHR – is set forth in the complaint, as is the timeframe 6 in which the statements were made.

7 However, apart from the speculation that it "must have been" Hartman and/or 8 Abrams who falsely stated that Charlson was terminated for stealing, the complaint does 9 not allege facts showing that Hartman or Abrams told anyone at Caldwell Partners anything 10 about the reason for Charlson's discharge from employment. Without the allegation of 11 such facts, as well as some indication as to the identity of the person or persons at 12 Caldwell to whom Hartman and Abrams communicated this information, the defamation 13 claim fails as to Hartman and Abrams, and the remaining claims asserted against Hartman 14 and Abrams also fail, as they are premised on the alleged defamatory statements.

15 As for Charlson's argument that the causes of action for intentional and negligent 16 interference with prospective economic advantage, the IIED claim, and the § 17200 claim 17 are based on "breach" or "invasion" of privacy and interference with his ability to secure 18 employment, the court finds that the alleged false statements about the reason(s) for 19 Charlson's termination underlie and provide the basis for those claims. Thus, having failed 20 to adequately allege facts showing that Hartman and Abrams falsely stated to someone at 21 Caldwell Partners that Charlson was terminated from DHR for stealing, the complaint also 22 fails to state a claim for interference with prospective economic advantage, IIED, or unfair 23 business practices (asserted as a derivative claim based on other causes of action).

24 The dismissal is with leave to amend to plead facts sufficient to support the cause of 25 action for defamation, as stated above. Plaintiff may also amend the other causes of action 26 asserted against Hartman and Abrams, if he is able to allege facts supporting those claims 27 independently of the allegation that Hartman and Abrams made false statements to 28 someone at Caldwell Partners regarding the reasons Charlson was terminated.

1 2. Motion to remand

2 Charlson seeks an order remanding the case to San Francisco Superior Court, 3 arguing that there is no diversity jurisdiction, and defendants have not met their burden of 4 showing that removal was proper. Defendants oppose the motion on the ground that 5 Hartman and Abrams were fraudulently joined and the complaint fails to state a claim 6 against them.

7 A party is considered fraudulently joined where the complaint clearly fails to allege a 8 state law claim against that defendant. See Hunter v. Philip Morris, 582 F.3d 1039, 1044
9 (9th Cir. 2009). "It is a commonplace that fraudulently joined defendants will not defeat 10 removal on diversity grounds." Ritchey v. Upjohn Drug Co., 139 F.3d 1313, 1318 (9th Cir.
11 1998). In the context of fraudulent joinder, the court's inquiry into the viability of the claims 12 is less stringent than the standard applied to motions to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6).
13 Briano v. Conseco Life Ins. Co., 126 F.Supp. 2d 1293, 1299 n.5 (C.D. Cal. 2000); see also 14 Mayes v. Rapoport, 198 F.3d 457, 466 n.15 (4th Cir. 1999).

15 Because courts must resolve all doubts against removal, a court determining 16 whether joinder is fraudulent "must resolve all material ambiguities in state law in plaintiff's 17 favor." Macey v. Allstate Property and Cas. Ins. Co., 220 F.Supp. 2d 1116, 1117 (N.D. Cal.
18 2002) (citation omitted). "If there is a non-fanciful possibility that plaintiff can state a claim 19 under [state] law against the non-diverse defendant[,] the court must remand." Id.; see also 20 Good v. Prudential, 5 F.Supp. 2d 804, 807 (N.D. Cal. 1998). "There is a presumption 21 against finding fraudulent joinder, and defendants who assert that plaintiff has fraudulently 22 joined a party carry a heavy burden of persuasion." Plute v. Roadway Package Sys., Inc., 23 141 F.Supp. 2d 1005, 1008 (N.D. Cal. 2001); see also Gaus, 980 F.2d at 566.

24 Charlson argues that he has adequately alleged defamation against Abrams and 25 Hartman, because he has alleged the substance of the allegedly defamatory comments, 26 has alleged the general time frame (April 2014), has alleged who make the statements 27 (Hartman and Abrams), the audience for the statements (Wallace or someone at Caldwell), 28 and has alleged the impact of the defamatory statements on his employment prospects.

1 The court finds that the motion must be DENIED for the reasons stated above, 2 based on Charlson's failure to state a claim for defamation against Hartman and Abrams. If 3 Charlson amends the complaint and succeeds in stating a claim against Hartman and 4 Abrams, he may renew his motion to remand at that point.

CONCLUSION

In accordance with the foregoing, defendants' motion to dismiss is GRANTED and plaintiff's motion to remand is DENIED. Any amended complaint shall be filed no later than October 23, 2014. No new causes of action or new parties may be added without leave of court.
